City students get their hands dirty for a cause

Students of Jain University — Centre for Management Studies (JU-CMS) had no qualms as they picked up brooms and got their hands dirty to clean the streets near their college recently. In a bid to promote cleanliness, students of JU-CMS recently organized a cleanliness drive where more than 25 students participated and cleaned the streets near their premises on Lalbagh Road. In addition to this, students also held a rally and a social-media campaign, with which they interacted with people from the locality and created awareness about a clean environment.
